To the Editor of the Dispatch: title. "The Daughter of the Con-title," The Daughter of the Con-ty," was bestowed upon Miss Davis when her father made his famous roughout the South. Exhausted by riends, the General drew Miss Davis to imply, and throwing his arms around her, said that "in the absence of the father, he begged to present the daughter—The Daughter of the Confederacy"—and from that hour as such she was known and welcomed everywhere.

Southern born and southern bred, the laughter of a distinguished father (whom till the world acknowledged as one of the most brilliant sons of American production, whose genius, courage, and honest convictionsied him to the leadership of one of the longest fiercest, and most imposing the longest fiercest, and most imposing tion, whose genius, courage, and most convictionsied him to the leadership of one of the longest, fiercest, and most imposing civil wars of modern times), this lady emerged from the resultant havoc of internecine strife, with all its conspicuous glories rendered to the native sphere, and exultant victory perching upon the banners of the conquerors, and freely mingled amongst the people of America, not alone as a self-appointed commissioner of universal peace, but as a modest and lovely exemplar of perfect womanhood, freeing herself from all sectional environments, and creating for herself the exalted reputation of a true type of the American woman. It mattered not where she appeared, whether in the obscure wilds of our extended hand, or in its gay and crowded salons, where beauty here she appeared, whether in the obure wilds of our extended land, or in s gay and crowded salons, where beauty id refinement shone resplendent, or in e staid and cultured homes of the East, e luxurious ranches of the gold siegs mes of her native South-from the rude its of the negro quarters to the pillared e-trimmed mansions of the planters all bowed to and adored this lovely man with the palm leaf in her hand, ence and good will to all men? was rose-trimmed mansions of the financial all, all bowed to and adored this lovely woman with the palm leaf in her hand. "Pence and good will to all men" was the enchanting song, the inspiriting watchword of her beautiful life. So unoutrusive was she in her quiet munner, and yet so sweetly convincing in all she said and did, that women cheerfully yielded to her womanly touch and stalwart men felt blessed and honored in her presence. She never impressed those she met in either section of our great land as the daughter of a conquered man, but only perfectly reflected the purity and nobility of the careful training, resulting in the loftlest characteristics embodied in the perfect woman. From the first hour of her maturity, when she was ushered into society, her irresistible influences in mollifying sectional differences began to ciety, her irresistible influences in moni-fying sectional differences began to be felt. She had nothing to excuse in her exalted sire's life—there was nothing to excuse. She loved and honored him, and his memory became a sacred altar to her, before which she prostrated herself with all a fond daughter's devotion! But she found a new and broad mission opened up to her—a mission to heal old wounds, vet featuring: the bringing together esso fit as she to throw the oil of and calm over the district oil of reunited nation? She administered her peaceful mission patiently and gently. No rude, repellant word ever escaped her lips. Even those most stubbornly prejudiced, who came within her gentle presence, were forced to ask themselves what the father and mother must be who had reared so perfect a child. And so, by her sweet and pacific influence, the hard scales that had blinded the eyes of so many—only because of sectional prejudices—began to melt away, and sentiments of regret that the people of our nation had ever been at war with one another grew rapidly in the hearts of those who had sullenly held aloof until this daughter of a dead cause beheld the rich fruit of her holy mission fully ripened and gratefully devoured by a united and forever indissolubly cemented nation. Her mission is ended, but the wholesome and imperishable impressions of her work can never die, so long as there beats a true American heart to feel the healing balm she has left as our precious inheriwas then put on the docket.

The new crop of this district is now being successfully cut and cured under more than ordinarily favorable conditions, and the indications are that it is greatly superior to any grown for many yoars past. Good and seasonable rains in the growing time gave the plants good size and strength, and favorable conditions at the time of maturing developed good quality. It is estimated that about three Jourths of the crop in the counties adjacent to this market has been cut and housed. Some specimens of earlier curings brought to town this week show excellent quality and uniform rich dark color. Perhaps the warm rain prevailing last week may bring to market within a short time some crops of earlier curings, though liberal receipts are not expected earlier than about November 1st.

THE DRY-GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, September 29.—The market for dry-goods was a quiet one to-day. There was little or no trading at first hands, and there were few buyers in the city. Mail orders were also light in nearly all divisions of the market. The week has not railied from the conditions resulting from the celebration of the Jewish holiday on Monday. There were some changes in the market, but they were not of vital importance.

LYNCHBURG TOBACCO MARKET.
LYNCHBURG, VA., September 28.—As practically all of the 1837 crop of tobacco of this district is out of the hands of planters by this time, the offerings in the loose tobacco market this week consist almost entirely of new brights received from Carolina planters and shippers.

Receipts of these bright kinds are now cepts, $23.35 bales; to France, 16.50 bales, to the Continent, 19.163 bales.

The general temper of to-day's cotton market was bullish, with covering of old short accounts a feature of the transactions. Prices advanced 2 to 3 points, at the start, in sympathy with a strong set of English cables, and on bullish weather reports from the cotton belt. Private cables to the effect that yarns and cloths at Manchester were hardening, and that spinners were bidding old prices freely for large blocks of spot cotton at Liverpool, added to the better feeling here, and increased the apprehension of the less confident bears. A sharp reaction in futures at Liverpool led to seiling, in the late forenoon, and by midday the early gain had been about wiped out, although at no time did the market show signs of particular weakness. Covering set in anew early in the afternoon, and on this demand prices again rallied, with the January and March deliveries absorbing the bulk of attention. Investment buying stimulated the buil crowd to something like old-time aggressiveness. At the close the feeling was quiet and steady, with prices net 1 point higher. Orders from the South went chiefly to the long side, while foreign representatives were consticuous as buyers throughout the assiston. Official forecasts were for further rains in the lower balf of the cotton belt during the next twenty-four hours. This was regarded as an important built fea-
